shop floor, where most pay gaining in engineering and shiplding takes place, and could thus ig a gap in the effectiveness of the ge restraint provisions of the ial contract.

Loyalty to the Lahour Government s the key factor in determining the. rcome of the five-hour wage bate. Moderate delegates urged e committee of 52 not to embarrass Wilson's Administration by drawup a claim that violated the JC's guidelines.

Mr James Griffin, a leading oderate from Coventry, argued: Now, we have no Phase One, Two Three legislation to contend with, it we have got a social contract. id we mean what we said when we id we supported a Labour Governent, and got them back, or was it st airy-fairy nonsense?"

There were, he said, clauses in the TUC's guidelines that gave enough scope and flexibility to the AUEW negotiators to win a substantial increase within the social contract. The left's position was most powerfully pressed by Mr James Airlie, leader of the upper Clyde shipbuilding workers, who advised delegates to bave "no psychological hang-ups" ahout the social contract or they would he out of touch with the rank and file. He said:

"Discussion of the social contract is not only irrelevant to the situation in the industry. It is dangerous, and perpetuates the myth that high wages are responsible for inflation and hides the real problem of the British economy: the lack of investment and the export of capital"

The engineers' executive of eight was almost equally divided about the merits of the different proposals. Mr Hugh Scanlon, president of the AUEW, asked the conference for a compromise policy that would retain figures but leave the union's negotiators with some room to manoeuvre. After the vote he agreed that delegates had opted to exercise free collective bargaining "within the responsibilities that we have", adding: "I think it is true that the majority want us to act with some

The engioeers' policy-making hody is always finely balanced hetween the left and moderate factions, the demand would have increased the industry's pay bill by an estimated 40 per cent.

In the event, the Engineering Employers Federation and the Ship-builders and Repairers National Asssociation will be faced with a more flexible bargaining position when the industry's agreement comes up for renewal in March. The engineers' resolution will be processed through the negotiating machinery of the Confederation of Shiphuilding and Engineering Unions, representing all the unions. before the final claim is submitted early next year.

Present basic rates are £28.50 a week for craftsmen, £23.50 for labourers and £22.50 for women.

Those minima are due to rise to £32, £25.50 and £23.50 respectively on March 1. The employers are likely to argue that under the terms of the social contract the unions cannot social contract the unions cannot expect a further increase before September, one year on from the first big increase of the Pbase Three deal concluded in May. The moderates did not explain what they meant by "substantial", but, judging from remarks made at the rostrum yesterday, the ship-huilding and engineering industries are likely to face a demand for £8 to £10 a week more on the craftsmen's rate, with pro rata-increases for other grades. That represents a much less heavy cost on the wage bill of the country's basic exporting industry.

The national committee, which usually meets-in April, was recalled yesterday to discuss the shape of the next pay claim after a decision taken at the conference earlier this year to delay consideration of pay policy notil the industrial and political situation had clarified.

Inflation warning: Mr Foot gave a warning in the Commons yesterday that unless trade union negotiators followed the guidelines of the social contract the Government's ability to curb inflation would be greatly injured (Hugh Noyes reports from Westminster). It was of paramount importance, be rold the House on the last day of the debate on the Queen's Speech, that those guidelines should be sustained.

The Secretary of State for Employment, a former favourite of the left-wing Tribune group of Labour MPs, came as close as he has ever done to proclaiming that it was unreasonably high wage iocreases that were the main threat to the Government's efforts to bring inflation under control. If the social contract guidelines were broken consistently, he added, the task of preventing heavy unemployment would he made much more difficult and the Government's policy for the health service and education would be endangered.

Mr Foot said he was considerably coocerned at some of the receot settlements. The lorry drivers' settlement in Scotland was one that had gone heyond the guidelines. It was of great importance, he went on, to maintain the rule that there should he a 12-month interval between wage increases and it must be realized that if the minimum wage target of £30 a week was to be reached, other workers would bave to have differentials reduced. He was concerned about the feature of the Ford workers' settlement involving a hreach of the 12-month rule.

Mr Foot went on to insist that the right way to deal with those matters was oot to return to statutory control of incomes. The use of unemployment as a weapon against inflation also was abhorrent to him. The only alternative, which would have to he applied over a period, not just weeks or months, must be the policy of consent.

An astouisbing trailer for Mr Healey's autumn Budget next week was giveo to MPs in the Commons last night by Mr Short, Labour's deputy leader, when he wound up oo the last day of the dehate on the Queeo's Speech.

Loyalist women occupy BBC office in Belfast and demand action over Maze jail conditions

Protests against cooditions io the Maze Prison at Long Kesh reached a new pitch yesterday when more than seventy "loyalist" women, some carrying children, took ovar part of the BBC offices in the centre of Belfast to press for improvements at the jail.

The sit in cootinued last night, and a spokesman said they would not leave until Protestant welfare workers were allowed to visit prisoners.

The sit-in, the first of a saries of demonstrations threatened for the coming week, came 00 the day that a large delegation of politicians was allowed into tha Maze to inspect conditions. Many of the compounds there were destroyed by fire during the recent riots and there has been growing concern since about the living quarters and

The workers want to safe-guard imports of 1,400,000 tons of Commonwealth sugar. Terms for those supplies will be negotiated later this month by the EEC, and the workers fear that bigger imports of sugar that bigger imports of augar from Europe may threaten 9,000 Britisb refining jobs.

The London refinery blockade threatens sugar supplies to the South and the Midlands. Sir John Cohen, head of Tesco, one of Britain's biggest supermarket chains, said yester day that some form of sugar rationing should be introduced. He was speaking after receiving a delegation from the National Housewives' Association, whom he had invited to inspect Tesco warehouses to prove they were not boarding sugar.

London Transport fare increases aimed at raising £35m extra to counter annual deficit of £100m

Sir Ricbard Wey, chairman of Loodon Traosport, ennounced details yesterdey of where the 35 per cent fare in-creases planned for oext March will fall. He complained bitterly that the governing Labour group's low-fare policies left a perpetual £100m annual deficit to he subsidized by the Greater London Council. Thet threetened moderoizetion plans.

The increases, aimed at raising £35m, have heen drawn up at the GLC Labour group's request. Fares heve stayed the seme since 1972 end Sir Richard priored out ther the proposed poioted out thet the proposed increases were still below the rate of inflation. To wipe out the projected 1975 deficit of £126m, fares would bave oeeded to be more than doubled.

If approved by the GLC and the Prices Commission, the increases will start on March 23.

The minimum fare on the buses will rise from 3p to 4p, and the Sp and 8p fares will go up by by 2p. On the Uoderground, most fares will go up by 5p as the distance between fare steges is cut.

There are some extra concessions given to travailers to London Transport's higgest package of fare rises yet. The GLC Lebour group asked for £3.5m to be spent on allowing children to travel all day for a flat 3p fare, and in relieving night workers of having to pay night workers of having to p double fares on night buses.

Bus passes, for unlimited travel, will not go up and bolders will be be able to take a companion free oo huses at weekends. A oew Red Bus pass extension at £4 a month will be introduced for Uoderground season ticket bolders.

In order to simplify bus fares towards the point where it might eventually he possible to have only three fares and one-man huses throughout the system. Loodoo Transport is also curing the rarely-used maxi-mum fares from 18p and 20p to a new 15p maximum. Sir Richard said that staff recruitment was improving and it was boped to bave a full Underground service back by the middle of next year. But the efforts to attract staff had forcad up costs. London Trans-port's surplus of £10m last year hed been unread, because of the shortage of 7,000 staff. "There are already threaten-ing signs that the vast reveoue deficit into which we beve been allowed to run will forca the GLC ioto a cuthack in our capital programme." One of the "sitting targets" here, he said, was the £6m-£10m planned for station modernization.

Greater London Council Tuesday, November

By Our Local Government Correspondent

Even at this time of economic peril it was vital to maintain the provision for arts and recreation in Loodon, tha Greater London Council decided ar its meeting last night.

The capital appaared at times to be in a state of siege against imminent doom as members debated the priorities to be eccorded to the arts and leisure in the present circumstances. The bright example of Myra Hess in the war and of the Festival of Britain after it were cited as illustrations to raise the public spirit in those days of economic stringency. All but one of the members who spoke emphasized the need to maintain the momentum of the council's programme for the arts and to spend more money on the provision of recrea-tional facilities. The exception was Mr Frank Smith (Becken-ham, C).

Mr Smith was the first to speak on a report prepared by the policy and resources com-mittee and the arts and recre-etinn committee on "whethar the proportion of the council's total budget devoted to arts and recreation is sufficient to achieve the declared aims of the council to enhance the arts and improve recreetional facilidoo and if not what action is prinoised in remedy the situation."

Mr Rabin ready for showdown with US on role of PLO

Jerusalem, Nov 5

OVERSEAS-

Two days before Dr Kissinger's arrival in Jerusalem, Mr Rahin, the Prime Minister, today reiterated Israel's refusal to negotiate with the Palestine Liberadoo Organization over the future of the West Baok.

He coodemned the decisions of the Arab summit cnoference of the Arab summit choiserence at Rabat, which appnioted the PLO as custodian of the West Bank and Gaza in place of Jordan, saying such decisions were designed to interrupt progress to peace and in enchurage terrorists. He said the United Nations had made a serious moral and political error by invining the PLO to address it.

Mr Rabin's tough line fore-shadows a confrontation with Dr Kissinger, who is expected to seek "flexibility" from Israel's leaders. In spite of denials, this can only mean that be wants them to find a way of talking to the guerrilla movement, though not oecessarily in public.

Mr Simha Dinitz, Israel's.

that there was no sign of any change in the American position or of pressure oo Israel to negotiate with the PLO. Read how Barclays can help you make the most of your leisure years

Solving the financial problems that face people of retiring age is something of a speciality at Barclays

Naturally, we have a wide range of services designed to meet their financial needs, from the Current Account to the unique Money Doctor Service.

But more than these, more even than all the financial experience that goes with them, we have discovered and studied many matters of concern other than those to do with money: health, where to live, what we might call the domestic adjustment, etc. In this we have sought the advice of a range of experts and what they have told us has been invaluable. So good, in fact, that we have decided to set it out in a book called "A Lively Retirement."

Here, with a foreword by Robert Dougall, is the answer to a lot of worries, and a mass of financial advice as well. The book will be on sale next year in the bookshops, but if you are approaching retirement and open an account with us, you will receive a free copy now.

Why not call in at Barclays and start on the path to a trouble-free retirement?

Announcing the 2nd series of Canadian Olympic Silver Coins

This is the second series of four coins, struck by The Royal Canadian Mint, authorised by the Canadian Government, to commemorate the Games of the XXI Olympiad to be held in Montreal in 1976.

Valuable 28-Coin Collection Following the first series on a Geographic theme, this second series bears ancient Olympic symbols. In all, there will be seven series of four coins each, issued regularly through to 1976 and each series will bear a different theme.

These Olympic Silver Dollars are legal tender sterling silver-92.5% silver-which means a pure silver content of 1.44oz troy for the $10 and .723oz troy for the $5 coin.

White Glove' Coins The series is available in two qualities: uncirculated coinage and specially minted proof coins.

The proof coins, struck on specially selected silver blanks with highly polished dies, are handled using only soft white gloves to preserve their perfection. Investment Potential

Proof of restricted issue is assured by the fact that all dies will be destroyed after minting. Valued Gift

Besides a treasured collector's item, Canadian Olympic Silver Coins represent a remarkable and valuable gift that should grow in value in the future.

Coins are available through officially appointed distributors. Please use the coupon provided.

PARLIAMENT, November 5, 1974—

Talks on picketing law continue: growing pressure for change

MR BLAKER (South Bedford-shire, C) asked the Secretary of State for Employment for a state-ment on his intentions about the law on picketing.

MR FOOT (Ebbw Vale, Lab)— Discussions on this matter are still

MR BLAKER—Is it proposed to proforward legislation which would enable pickets to compel people to stop on the Queen's Highway? If he does that, he will meet with strenuons opposition. (Conservative cheers and Labour interruptions.)

MR STANLEY (Tonbridge and Mailing, C)—The minister said he would consider introducing regulations governing how the right to picket peacefully would be exercised. Is be considering making a regulation prescribing the meximum number of people who can picket at any one place and at any one time?

MR FOOT—That is one of the aspects we will consider. It needs careful consideration.

MR FLANNERY (Sheffield, Hillsborough, Lab)—There is a strike and planned march today by working people about the Shrewsbury pickets. This is lieble to snowball throughout the country nntil we bave a situation similer to the five Pentonville dockers. Will the minister see not only that these unjust sentences are mitigated but that there is a free pardon for men whom many people believe to be innocent (Conservative protests.)

MR FOOT—This is a matter for the Home Secretary and I am sure be will take into account all the representations made to him. MR CHURCHILL (Stretford, O)—Can the minister give an undertaking that in any legislation be may have in mind on this subject be will in no way infringe the rights of the individual employee and trade unionist to ettend their place of work free from the fear of intimidation? (Conservative cheers and Labour interruptions.)

MR FOOT—We are very much

Conservative MPs showed equal concern. (Labour cheers.)

SIR DEREK WALKER-SMITH (East Hertfordshire, C)—Will the minister see that that whatever changes are made in the law the hasic principle of our picketing law, as recently reaffirmed in the groups case is maintained. Broome case is maintained—namely, that a picket may invite a person to stop for the purpose of stop or detain him against his will? (Conservative cheers.)

MR FOOT—Certainly, we on this side cannon that the till legislative provisions are always those that may be the outcome of judicial decisions. Thet is not what nuceral decisions. Thet is not what our history seems to Sustain. Therefore we will consider the judgment along with the other matters when we are seeking to establish the right of peaceful pick-eding. (Labour cheers.)

The lew bas remained virtually unchanged, with some judicial glosses, since 1906. It is perfectly proper for adequate discussion to take place to see how the law can be brought up to date.

MR HAYHOE (Hounslow, Brentford and Isleworth, C)—Will the minister support the Home Secre-tary in resisting demands for either pardons or early parole for the Shrewsbury pickets who bave been convicted? (Conservetive cheers.)

MR BOOTH—Over the six months fram August, 1973, to Feoruary, 1974, the index of retail prices rose by 8.3 per cent, compared with the 8.2 per cent I gave in the reply. There is no evidence on that basis that there has beed en ecormous increase in the infletionary spiral. On the contrary.

Since 1946 workers' control has been an important basic purpose of nationalizatiod. Publicly-owned industries should be the pacemakers in workers' control.

MR ROST (South-East Derby-shire, C) asked what was the Secretary of State for Employ-medt's estimete of the number of registered unemployed this winter.

MR FRASER, Under-Secretary of State (Lambeth, Norwood, Lab).—At the time of the count on October 14 it was estimated thet in Great Britain meety 613,000 were registered unemployed. It is not the practice of this Administration. nor bas it been of previous administrations, to publish fore-casts of unemployment.

MR ROST—When will the Government realize that the only way they can now prevent a massive rise in unemployment is to curb wage inflation and restore some cash end confidence to industry? Whet hope is there of that under this Government's pullcies?

The huilding of schools and colleges used to be planned on the hasis that so many places would be needed in a certain year and the money was allocated to huild those places. The present rate of infla-tion had about finished that kind of planning and they had to plan instead, not on the huilding of a certain number of schools, which was sensible, but on the basis of allocating a certain lump sum to the local authorities who had to choose their own projects.

The Government placed reliance on the social cootract in the Queen's Speech as an essential element in tackling four problems: inflation the halaoce of payments deficit, industrial investment and maintaining employment.

She had tried to obtain docu-ments which previously bad been waved about which indicated what the social rontract was all about.

MR FOOT said history bad moved on—(Couservative laughter)—and Labour at least had learned. A argutory incomes policy was no solution to the problems of inflation.

It was of paramount importance It was of paramount importance that no one in the House should mislead people about what was really bappening. That was the burden of his complaint about Mr Heath's claim during the election that wage settlements were running at 40 per cent a year or more. At that time, there was on truth in the claim, but the Scottish lorry drivers' settlement went beyond the guidelines, and he did not seek to disguise that. get of £30 a week would mean other workers would have to have differentials reduced. if they were broken persistently it would mean that the task of preventing beavy unemployment would be made much more difficuit. It would he much more difficult to carry through the whole of the Government's policies in the health service and education. The right way to deal with those matters was not a return to statutory incomes control. The use of unemployment was equally abbor-rent. The only alternative—and it must be applied over a period, not just weeks or months-must be the policy of consent. What governments had to do was not to preach but to create the conditions in which the free institutions of the country could operate successfully—free institutions and new institutions that they helped to develop out of older leading to the way are of the institutions. That was part of the reason the Government had deve-loped the Conciliation and Arbitration Service which was going to be an important institution in industrial affairs.

The Government had insisted upon the independence of the CAS. Both sides of industry were demonstrating confidence in using the new service.

The purpose of CAS was to see how they could overcome disputes and in many cases to help in preventing the disputes ever taking Wiping out the 1971 Industrial Relations Act was one of the most urgent measures to introduce into the House. It must be done because the Government believed the trade unions constituted one of the essential democratic institutions of the country and must be constituted to execute the constitutions of the country and must be constituted to execute the constitutions of the c givan the opportunity to exercise their authority and influence.

To reach the minimum wage target of £30 a week would mean there workers would have to have inferentials reduced. The nurses, businen, and railwaymen were hardest hit by the old statutory system.

It was of paramount importance that the guidelines should be austrained. If they were hroken and broken perfectivity it would mean the statutory in the statutory and ensure they could operate to the full.

The Queen's Speech spoke of

The Queen's Speech spoke of encouraging industrial investment and expansion, but the proposed legislation seemed totally irrelevant. They needed new criteria by which they could judge the vigour and profitability of companies. MR GOULD (Southampton, Test, Lab), in a maiden speech said it was a measure of the gravity of the national housing situation thar aven, in Southampton, bons-ing had become the single most pressing national problem. MR WYN ROBERTS (Cooway, C) said the Government were all set to fan the flames of inflation just when they could be brought MR RONALD THOMAS (Briatol, North-West, Lab), in a maideo speech, said the bulk of financial backing for the aerospace industry came ultimately from public funds. Public ownership of a nationally integrated aerospace industry would provide a centralized plan for forecasting and marketing which was essential. It would also end wasteful duplication of research and development and would ensure that public expendi-ture was subject to public account-ability.

MR REID (Stirlingshire, East and Clackmannan, Scot Nat) said the Queen's Speech was rather a hit and miss affair for Scotland. They were suspicious of the propo-sals for further netionalization in the Scottish sense and resentful of the treatment of Scottish farmers, which could lead to the ruin of a great Scottish industry.

MR DOUGLAS-MANN (Merton, Mitcham and Morden, Lab) said emergency measures to conserve energy should be taken. Petrol rationing and the restoration of the 50 mph limit would be a start. The main problems—the immediate economic difficulties, the desperate social problems of bad housing, deteriorating public services, the near collapse of the health service, public transport getting worse and worse, and et the same time the world problem of dwindling mineral and other resources—pointed to the need for austerity in the rich countries starting now. Private consumption should be cut into. He would welcome rationing of meat. Some curtilization of consumption would be tailment of consumption would do

MR TIMOTHY RENTON (MidSussex, C) said that not being allowed to charge the economic destructive for the management of the nationalized industries. The point was rapidly being reached at which it would be impossible for any government to put up the prices of gas, electricity od postal charges to the right level because charges to the right level because such an increase would be unaccep-table to customers.

MR KILROY-SILK (Ormskirk, Lab) said the case for greater gov-eroment intervention in industry eroment intervention in management rested on the intrinsic merits of the proposals and on the failure of ladge sectors of private industry.

MR SHORT, Lord President of MR SHORT, Lura President of the Council (Newcastle upon Tyne, Central, Lab), said it was still impossible to state the timetable for devolution with certainty. There were whole areas of decision to be taken involving the most complex least and constitutional complex legal and constitutional matters of a depth and nature upprecedented in their history. He hoped that the legislation would be drafted during the present session and by Christman be boped to be able to give a much firmer timetable. There would be oo avoidable delay. The mammoth task of unscrambling the constitution in respect of Scotland and Wales would be pushed ahead as fast as was humanly possible. Succour and help for the weak should accompany sacrifices from the strong. When he talked of sacrifices, he did not mean just sacrifices for the individual, hur also the local authority that would not be able to carry out all its schemes. Many would not be able to do that for some years to come. It meant local authorities would not be able to do all they wanted, MPs who would not get a by-pass od hospital, and a university which must defer a much-needed build-

It also meant the profession which insisted on preserving a differential with ancillary workers and it meant the gallery, the theatre and the hallet company which would all bave to tighten their belt a little. It was no good arging that it was somebody else's hospital which must go to the end of the queue. The Government had to ensure that the sacrifices were fairly spread, and that one area or service or one area or service or one area or service. vice or one group, did not get abead by transoling others into the ground. The dangers and delights of life on two wheels

Patrick Litchfield, Jon Pertwee, and the Duke of Gloucester bave in common? They all have money? Yes, but they also all-ride motorbikes. After nearly half a century of associations with the cloth-cap of the working man and later with the greasy denim jeans, studded leather jacket and long hair of the ton-up boys and Hell's Angels, the motorbike bas assumed social acceptability and motorcycle sales are booming.

More and more young professional men, and women, are overcoming their reluctance to don helmet, goggles and water-proofs. They are turning a firmly shut eye to the very real dangets of motorcycling in order to take advantage of the motorcycle's cheapness, swiftness and convenience, especially io rush-hour traffic.

Back in the 1920s the heyday of the British motorcycle, the powered two-wheeler was as classless as the motor car is today. It was by no means considered unusual, for example, that the Duke of York, iater to become King George VI, rode a motorbike while be was an undergraduate at Cambridge.

Until about 1922 motorcycles cars, nctually outnumbered cars, which were still too expensive for most people. By 1929 there were 500,000 mororhikes on the roads, with the great British machines like the Brough Superior, the BSA Sloper and Ariel SG 31 known the world

Then came the 1931 slump. Cheaper cars began to come onto the market. The age limit for motorcyclists was raised from 14 to 16. The British motorcycle industry was hard hit and a series of mergers took

What do Lord Snowdon, Sir place leaving only two main Ralph Richardon, Harold Evans, manufacturers—the BSA, Ariel and Triumph group and Associated Motorcycles, which in-cluded Norton-Villiers, AIS and Matchless. By 1939 registrations had fallen to 350,000.

After the war the demand for motorcycles began to pick up again. Registrations rose steadily throughout the 1950s to reach a peak of 1,869,000 in 1961. But British manufac, and mopeds 50cc and under fell turers never really recovered, slightly in the first six They bung on precariously for a while hut then succumbed beneath the onalaught of the cheaper lower-powered mopeds and scooters from Italy and France.

The arrival of the fast, quiet, light - weight, keenly - priced Japanese machines in the 1960s completed the British motorcompleted the British motor-cycle's demise. Today the Japanese hold about 85 per cent of the marker (Honda alone holds about 65 per cent), with the sole-surviving hig British manufecturer, Norton Villiers-Triumph, competing with the Czechs (lawa). Germans (BMW) and Italians (Giera, Garelli, etc.) for the remaining 15 per cent. 15 per cent.

Between 1950 and 1960 motorcycle and car sales rose at about the same pace, maintaining a ratio of three cars to every one motorcycle. But the advent of the BMC Mini in 1960 knocked the bottom out of the motorcycle market. By 1972 total motorcycle registrations had almost balved, falling below 1,000,000 for the first time in 20 years. Meanwhile car sales soared, total registrations rising from 5,500,000 in 1960 to 12,700,000 in 1972.

Serious injuries no motorbikes more vulnerable than a car occufor the first time since 1961. rose 6 per cent last year and pant, having no so-called second-The economic squeeze and the oil crisis hit car sales badly in the first six months of this year; compared with the same period last year they fell from 931,130 to 679,642. Sales of motorcycles over 50cc went up by 5,000 to 50,616.

slighty in the first six months of this year this was merely a lower-geared continuation of the boom in mopeds, which started in 1970 following the arrival off the sporty-looking Austrian Puch, and which took off after the age limit for motorbikes proper was raised at the end of 1971 to 17, restricting 16 years like to moneds.

The increase in the number of young people riding mopeds is one of the main reasons for the dramatic rise in moped accidents last year. Fatal accidents totalled 75, an increase of 79 per cent over the previous year, serious injuries were up by 31 per cent to 2,049 and alight injuries were up 43 per cent to

The motorcycle industry became so concerned that it set up the Schools' Traffic Education Programme (STEP) at the end of last year to give school-children a basic grounding in roadcraft as well as teaching them to ride mopeds and motorcycles. The industry has contributed £10,000 to the scheme this year which is now being used by ahout 500 schools. (Inquiries should be sent to: serious Motorcycle Training, P.O. Box a car.

slight injuries 7 per cent. Figures for the first three months this year show serious motorcycle injuries up 9 per cent and slight injuries up 12 per cent while serious and slight car injuries fell by 20 per cent. (partly, of course, due to the lower speed limit and petrol

But fatal accidants on motorhikes have not increased. Last year 606 were killed, compared with 603 the year before, and in the first three months of this year 108 were killed, exactly the same number as during the same period last year. The enforcement of the compulsory wearing of crash helmets in June last year has certainly helped to keep fatal accident figures

It is difficult to make meaningful comparison of car and motor cycle accident rates. The Government's Road Research Laboratory concluded in a 1972 study that it was 30 times more dangerous to travel by motorbike than by car, using an average annual milage of 5,426 for a motorbike and 12,000 for a car. A Keele University study, commissioned by the motor cycle industry last year, using a 2,300 annual motor cycle milage, concluded it was only 6.7 times more dengerous. A study by the Consumer Associa-tion magazine Which?, pub-lished in April this year, estimated that a motor cyclist was 10 times more likely to have a serious or fatal accident than

But now the motorbike is coming back in a big way, and it is not just a flash in the pan caused by the oil emhargo last winter. Sales have been pickary safety factors apart from his belmet. An occident which would cause no more than a deni in a car can mean a broken limb for the motor cyclist. The most frequent cause of motor cycle accidents is a car or lorry driver simply failing to see the motor cyclist when pulling out of a side road or turning right across his path. One third of all motor cycle accideots take place on wet roads.

Accident rates for motorhike ere also kept high because of the disproportionate number of inexperienced road users armad ted to motor cycling. Young people may ride e moped two years hefore they may drive a car. Unlike the well-ostablished driving schools for car learners there is no real training programme for novice motor cyclists apart from the new STEP course and the scheme run jointly by the RAC and the Autocycle Union, which has Autocycle Union, which has heen in existence since 1947, hut which is not widely used. A motor cycle up to 250 cc may he driven indefinitely on a car licence, providing "L" plates are shown, without the rider having to take a test at all.

Motor cycles vary greatly in price and size from the cheapest moned custing about $115, run-moped costing about £115, run ning at a top speed of no more than 35 mph and doing up to 200 miles to the gallon, to powerful machines of 750-1,000 cc, costing between £1,000 and £2,000, capable of speeds up to 130 mph and still doing over 40 mpg. Road tax is a mere £2.50-£5 a year and parking in specially designated areas is usually free, even in the centre

Because vichysoisse is served cold it is often regarded as a summer soup; hut vichysoisse should be made in winter months when leeks are at their best. Add a little finely chopped pan and add the prepared vege-cables. Cover and saute gently for about five minutes to absorb Vichysolsse Serves 8 11b sbredded white part of leeks

2 pints stock Salt and freshly milled pepper pint single cream chopped chives

To achieve the traditional pale, creamy white soup only the white part of the leeks should be used-any green off cuts can be used to flavour other soops. Trim, wash and carefully shred the leeks for this recipe. Peel and finely chop the onion. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the leeks and onion. Cover and cook gently for about five minutes, or until the hutter is absorbed. Do not allow the vegetables to brown. Peel and slice the potato and add to the Toss with the buttery vegetables, then stir in the stock and a seasoning of salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer, cover and cook gently for 30

Rnh the vegetables and liquid through a fine sieve, or puree in an electric hlender. Allow to cool. Check seasoning and the consistency which should be of pouring cream, not too thick. Stir in the cream and chill until

Note: You can make balf the quantity of this soup and serve it hot for the family. In this case, return the puree soup to the saucepan and reheat. Stir in the cream and scatter with chopped parsley just before serving.

Sweetcorn sonp A white sauce can he used as part of the liquid in a soup recipe. It provides the thickening ageot and gives a rich, smooth flavour. Cream soups made from greens like lettuce, spinach or cucumher are often prepared this way. So is golden coloured sweetcorn soup.

Sweetcorn soup Serves 6 2 (11oz) tins sweetcorn 2 pint stock

1 level tablespoon flour 1 pint milk 1 level teaspoon salt

2-3 tablespoons single cream Chopped parsley to garnisb Drain the liquid from the cans of sweetcorn and empty the corn into a saucepan. Add the stock and simmer gently for about 20 minutes or until the the heat and either pass the liquid and corn through a vegetable mill or electric blender to make a puree.

Melt the hutter in the clean sancepan over low beat. Peel and finely chop the onion, add to the pan. Cover and cook gently for about five minutes or until the onion is tender, but not brown. Stir in the flong. Then gradually add the milk, stirring well all the the corn puree and the salt. Briog up to the boil and simmer for two to three minutes. Draw off the beat and stir in the cream. Soups are best made from scratch—hut there's no denying that you can make good use of left-over cooked vegetables too Mulligataway soup can be made using left over curry sauce and a little boiled rice. Mix together 1 teacupful curry sauce with 1 plut stock blended with 10z flour. Stir till boiling. Check seasoning and consistency. Stir in 1-2 tahlespoons boiled rice and a few meat or chicken scraps if available. You could make this same soup if you have some left over chicken or meat curry.

Spinach soup can be made using cooked spinach. Put 1 teacupful cooked spinach into a pan with joz butter and reheat gently. Sur in 1 pint thin white sauce—made using 1 pint milk infused with an onion and stirred into a hlend of loz butter and 2 level tablespoons flour. Re-2 level tablespoons flour. Re-beat sauce and spinach until boiling then puree. Thin down with milk or stock and rehest. Check seusoning and serve.

Mixed vegetable soup, Heat up 8-1202 mixed cooked

vegetables—carrots, leeks, omos, cauliflower or potato in 1 pint thin white sauce. Rab through a sieve and reheat. Thin down with stock if necessary. Reheat and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Paris Autumn Festival: moral fables and wild adventures

Paris, despite grey skies and the promise of further strikes, is the place to be this November. David Hockney is very much in favour. His exhibition, already described on this page by Michael Ratcliffe, draws crowds Michael Ratcliffe, draws crowds to the Musée des Arts Decoratifs, while Jack Hazan's Hocknew bio-pic, A Sudden Splash, still awaiting distribution in this country, plays bappily and uncorruptingly in Luxembourg and by the Etoile. Patrice Chereau has made the sizable social hop from the TNP at Villeurhain to the Opéra for the new Contes d'Hoffmann and new Contes d'Hoffmann and brought a mixture of boos and cbeers with him—but something of that controversial staging later in the week. Bresson and Bunuel are both keeping a clutch of cinemas going with their new films. Frankenstein seems to he everywhere, with Paul Morrissey's 3D picture thrusting lumps of flesh at the audience while Lady Frankenstein audience, while Lady Franken-stein too is playing around. But the catch of the season has been landed by the Festival d'Automne à Paris, which has persuaded Peter Brook to put his company and his work on display under its auspices. Brook's chosen theatre is the Bouffes du Nord; the first patrons needed to look it up on the map as the doors have been closed for a conple of decades. It is behind the Gare du Nord, wedged between a neighbourbood bar and a novelty shop: masks, fried eggs covered with flies, bombs to bring the house down (metaphorically) after a blow-out, raidy cat powder-sprinkle some oo the doorstep > law and "migulements amour-eux" will surely follow. Inside the theatre the atmosphere is rather more serious.

of your concierge or mother-in-daylight enters through the ironwork of the roof, the walls have leprous blotches. It is less a theatre than a church that has been ransacked and theo sbandoped by invaders of another faith.

The decay is just right for Brook's opening production. Timon of Athens; how it will affect other plays remains to be seen. Timon has been turned into French by Jean-Claude Carrière, one of Bunuel's best scriptwriters, and at times the Athenian and the Spanish veteran seem to bave a lot in common. When Timon at the beginning of tha second act, as it is played here, finds the gold that will make Black white, foul fair, wrong right, Base noble, old young, coward valiant it is almost possible to hear Bunuel's camera whirring. Carrière's translation is clean, modern and witty, similar in style to the adaptation Tony Harrison made of Le Mism-thrope for the National Theatre. A fair exchange, in deed: an eye for an eye, a spleen for a spleen.

Brook's first aim is to strip away all the mystique of the theatre; there are no foot-lights, no gap between specta-tor and player. The actors make their entrances and their exits through the guts of the stage where the machinery has long since crumbled into dust. No mechanical magic here and none of the glitter Brook used for his other Athens in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

In the first balf the performers seem as anxious to bear a story as to tell one while they form listening rings within the

the Painter a symbolic bobe-mian neckerchief, other players exchange at the right moment the white djellabahs of the Near East for the umbrella and top hat of authority. Brook clearly bates anchors, anything that will fasten a plsy in time, place or style. Context is anathema, and instead he stages a fable that cao be told anywhere and to anyone.

And perhaps this is what attracted bim to Timou, Shake-speare's most aponymous bero. The role can he played selon choix. Then years ago at Stratford Paul Scofield saw him as a man so far above the common throng that he did oot know what was going on helow. In Paris François Marthouret makes him a ricb young prodigal, dispensing his wealth with the abandoo of a Western pation squandering its fuel quota. M Marthouret, who has the good looks of the young Gerard Philippe, is happier riding on the crest of popu-larity than in his stage dugout burling out the great ran-corous speeches of Act IV. Here both the play and Peter Brook's moral fahle on waste and the crime of living beyond one's means lost for a moment their parrative momentum. But it is picked up again thanks to the bighly sympathetic per-formance of Flavius by Brook's company, only partially French, bas its weak members, and too often, even in this small house, where the remotest spectators are only a few yards from the actors, Carrière's words are lost. But be bas still produced a remarkable personal vision of an im-possible play, flecked with images that cling on in the and brilliant red cloak throwo over the left shoulder, standing against the pockmarked back wall of the thestre at the end, Peter Brook may distrust the magic of the theatre, but he cannot resist cresting it all the same. And, to judge from the clamorous demand for seats. Paris likes it that way.

Shakespeare and bis troupe. or maybe group, also turn up in the Grand Magic Circus's Good-bye Mr Freud. But everyone else is there as well: Dracola. Tsrzan, the Pope, Charlie Chap-lin, William Tell's widow and the bear Gustave merely bead the list. Followers of Jeronie Savary's company will already have guessed that it is the mixture as before. The only question is whether they are on nr off form. Very much on is the answer for the season which has just opened at the Porte Saint-Martin. It is odd to find Savary in a cooventional house, but he is oot a man to he intimidated. The boxes are filled with "gestations sonores"; an Argeotine singer entertains while the curtain is down; towards the end of the first balf the audi-torium is flavoured with the smell of onion soup being hrewed for the interval. The front stalls are not for fainthearts. As in other Savary shows anyone in the firing line is liable to be hit by a table or an axc from the stage, have a gun go nff in his ear or, rather nicer, bave a nude in his lap.

However, since Sarary is in Brook has taken it as it stands, although sections seem in danger of falling. The woodeo staircases lean tipsily inwards, the pages of the New Yorker, Alcibiades, with black uniform dropcloths to take his company anywhere from the Russian forest to the Carnival at Rio. with the sinking of the Titanic thrown in for good measure. As always, lerome Savary puts on a show and be doesn't mind plundering composers from Strauss (Joh.) to Joplio (S.) to do it. For the first time be has Michelipe Presle to help him-remember Le Diable au Corps. Miss Presle has ber bair curled ioto a poodle's topknot for much of the evening but other-wise looks like Dietrich in Knight without Armour, appro-priately enough as she spends the first sceoes escaping from the Russiao handits with the help of a white borse before giving birth to Simbad Freud. Amazingly, she blends in with the wild energy of this company which is expected to take on anythiog from Faust's closing trio to a Siamese twin being carved away from its sister.

There are spleodid performances from Jacquelioe
Sandra and Sylvie Kuhn playion people who would surely take out lihel actions were they alive.

Savary, in top hat and tails, swills his champagne and puffs at his cigar as narrator, con-ductor, rabblerouser and, nf course, circus ringmaster. He is not everyooe's magnum of Mumm. Some will follow the action of the white hen in the final scene, cluck faintly and make for the exit. The rest of us will be happy that even with a new state subsidy and a houlevard theatre Savary has nnt turned resnectable. That would be unthinkable.

What a pleasure it is to see Diversion of Angels in the repertory of Londoo Contemporary Dance Theatre. Partly for its own sake, partly for that of the dancers. Robert Coban was not idly boasting when he in fact, whether they bave ever looked better.

Of course, anyone who saw it danced by Martha Graham's own company is going to retain vivid memories of certain individuals who stamped the roles with their own personalities. That is no bad thing, as a reminder that there are depths of serenity and ardour in the work for the newcomers yet to plumb. But they have made an impressive start and need only to grow into their parts along the lines already marked out. rapture for the role of the woman in white who provides a still centre for the work both by her adagio, ably abetted by Naturon, and by her subdued enrries at other times. Linda Gibbs already carries off admirably some of the vivid entries of the woman in the red dress, and Robert North makes much of his early opportunities for power-fully awinging leaps and contrasting arrested poses.

The best performances so far come from Paula Lansley, giving both speed and passion to the claimed on this page yesterday entries of the woman in yellow, that they dance it well. I doubt, and from Micha Bergese, a dancer of greatly enhanced strength and control. Their duet has the lyric feeling of young love to its sudden springs and unexpected catches. The work depends not only on its principals, but also on the way the supporting en-semble manage their equally demanding passages: the slow cartwheels for the men, the gentle falls and re-overies for the women, the unhurried pace of quiet ecstacy throughout. It is a hallet of rare heavity and distinctive flavour to which all the dancers respond band-somely.

modern music, but it is a pleasant and sufficiently mus-cular piece, attractively played by the English Symphopy Orchestra conducted by John Perras. It is all the more welcome in this repertory which has sometimes tended to pursue the byways of music, and not necessarily the most rewarding

Last night's programme, opening a three-week season, also contained one work apiece by three other choreographers. Cohan's somewhat schematic but well contrived duet Eclipse was attractively and intelli-gently played by Siobban Davies and Robert North. Paul Taylor's 3 Epitaphs failed to make its usual hilarious effect, partly perhaps for lack of incisiveness in performanca.

However, a contributory fac-tor was probably the odd pro-gramming, which tsgged it oo as a tailpiece in a work in en-tirely different manner, Davies's Pilot. The casual, throwaway manner of this does not disguise the able invention which shows off its cast to good advantage in solos and duets. lgg Welthy's solo accompaniment on barmonica and Jew's harp draws unexpected variety from limited melody that starts the Andante, unforgettable even by Schubertian standards, and the whole movement had a grace, an ebh and flow, that yet did not hide the sorrow not far halow the sorrow not far touch in terms of texture and halance. Too much care sometimes drained the spontaneity from the reading. That may come with the essentials right The most telling momeut came in the withdrawn close of the first movement.

In Haydo's E flat Trio (HXV/29), the well integrated and tidy approach of the three players led to a solid but rather dull performance. The classical proprieties hardly ever gave way to something more illuminating except possibly when the pianist caught just the meaning of the innocentemente injunction for the Ravel's Trio was, for the most intimate Andaotico.

Television last night trudged a grim pace farther down the dispiriting road to Fahrenheit 451, that cultural terminus at which all life is lived via the flickering box, with an outside hroadcast in which fireworks went off to music. No longer will it he necessary, each Novemher 5, to put the cat in the larder and change ioto wellies for the privilege of baving a finger blown into the rockery; from now on, Papism may be pyro-technically exorcized from the comfort of your owo armcbair. The 'talians were the first to ignite, and the screen filled with exciting darkoess as the cameras poked about in the night looking for the star-bursts. When they found them, the wonderful effect was almost as captivating as static interference. What blobs. What streaks. Vhat marvellous crackling. The Spaniards came on next ushered in by the commentatur's breatbless, if unfatbomable. Comedy of Errors is favoured again to win for third time

Racing Correspondent Newcastle's "Fighting Pifth" Hardle and Cheitenham's longestablished Mackeson Gold Cup, which will be run on Saturday, trainers were required to give an inkling of their intentions at the four-day forfelt stage. Only six stood their ground for the "Fighting Fifth" Hurdle, for which Ladbrokes, the sponsors, opened an antepost book which reads: 4 to 6 Comedy of Strors, 2 to 1 Attivo, 7 to 1 Brantridge Farmer, and 12 to 1 True

Song.

The clast between Comedy of Errors and Attivo will be the principal taiking point. Champion hurdler until he was deposed by Lanzarote at Cheltenham it March, Comedy of Errors has won the "Fighting Fifth" Hurdle for the past two years. It was oncharacteristic of him to full, as he did, in his first and only race this season et Newbury. Attivo, the hest yoong burdler to emerge last winter, has never taken on nider, more experienced jumpers.

As there is oo hard and fast line between their form, we are groping in the dark, but the connexions of Comedy nf Errors can only have been hearteced by the happenings et Sandown Park last Saturday when Banlleu and Legal Tender—after Attivo two of the best four-year-olds in training—failed to make any impact on members of the older brigade headed by Tree Tengle, Moyne Royal and Lanzarote. If I interpreted that race correctly, Comedy of Errors is enotided to start favourite at cramped odds to beat Attivo.

Ladbroke's are also betting on the Mackeson Gold Cup. Yesterday they laid one bet of £3,000 to £1,000 against the antepost favourite Bruslee and promptly shortened his odds to 5 to 2. Bruslee and Soothsayer are joint favourites with Hills at 3 to 1, followed by Game Spirit at 5 to 1, the other Irish challenger, Lough Inagh, at 6 to 1, and the Benign Bishop at 8 to 1. Bramblestown, Coxswain and High Ken were the only other acceptors. At 20 to 1 High Ken will surely appeal to some as a long shot, even though one has to accept that he is a bit of a chancy jumper. There was a lot to like about the way that he ran in his first race this season at Newbury.

that he ran in his first race this season at Newbury.

There is a full and varied programme of jumping at Newbury again this afternoon. If one trainer is to leave the course at the end of the day with e greater share of the spoils than any other he could well be Fulke Waiwyn, who looks poised to win the first part of the second division of the Coid Ash Novices' Hurdle with Sunyboy and the Marsh Benham Handicap Steeplechase with Centaur. Bill Smith, injured in a fall at Fontwell Park two weeks ago, returns to the fray to ride Sunyboy, who will he running for the first time for Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother.

Sunyboy used to be owned by Lady Beaverbrook, for whom he woo the Newbury Autumn Cup and two other races on the flat last year. He also finished second in the krish Si Leger. Against such a backcloth I need not stress that he is brimful of ability. What remains to be seen is whether be can adapt himself to burdling it racing pace. Knowing that he has eccomplished everything that he bas been asked to do while practising on the downs above Upper Lambourn. I hope and think that he will. Sanyboy is preferred to Skytrain and Gunner Smith in spite of the fact that he lacks their experience.

The second part, and the first division, of the Cold Ash Novices' Hurdle may be won by Ballad Singer and Arctic Actor respectively. Arctic Actor won his first race at Plumpton comfortably enough, but be is unlikely to find the task of beating Miss Bood, Yasou, Flambeau and Raudy Brandy et all easy.

The second-part of the second division looks easier prey. Ballad Singer, who won three flat races this summer, ran well enough in two of his three races over hurdles last winter to suggest that he bas

Cork, Nov 5 Reserving some of their heaviest and better known artillery for the battle with Munster on Saurday battle with Munster on Sammay, the All Blacks begin their short tour of Ireland comocrow (3 o'clock)—against Combined Universities—by giving no fewer than ten members of their party a first taste of rugby in the British Isles.

And, praise be, the touring team will begin the proceedings, es they always used to do, with the Halts comorrow's match. The callest tour. It may carry a feasome message, but it conveys the warmin and charisma of honoured adversaries, here to do battle again, and to renew or to make friendships that should last a life elder brother.

It is a pity that the Universitles'

The All Blacks see this tour, as they did their recent expedition to Anstralia, as a further opportunity to rebuild their strength and as a stepping stone towards the recovery of supremacy in world rugby. This is their quiet and determined ambition, and as they deal graciously with occasionally patronising queries about whether or not they will be up to the job. The Lions may have won in New Zealand in 1971, but let no one forget that the All Blacks did not lose an international on their last full four in the United Kingdom. The wheel really has come fall circle if we start getting complacent.

Tomorrow the oppositino may be the most modest they face throughout a testing programme, but no one will expect miracles. It is still less than a week since they arrived. The effects of jet lag must still be with them.

Ian Kirkpatrick, Sidney Going (who has had a slight ankle injury—a recurring trouble) and Brian Williams, now said to be back to the startling form he revealed in South Africa in 1970, are sitting our today's game, and the new captain, Andrew Leslie, will be supported up front by only two forwards familiar to home spectators. The Universities, in addition, have five men with experience of inter-provincial football. Wednesday. Preece, who had to drop out of the last match because of an ankle injury, replaces club colleague Coulthard. The Warwickshire team, who have scored 96 points in their first two matches, is otherwise unchanged.

Lavery, an Irish international wing, will make a late Saturday night dash from Limerick to play for London Irish in the first round of the knockout cup at Maidstone on Sunday. He is playing for Monster against the All Blacks in Limerick oo Saturday afternoon.

When be gets to Maidstone he will find a surprise choice as his centre partner. Irish have chosen Rea, last year's club captain, who usually plays in the back row. Rea has been away in the Middle East with the Army and only recently returned to this coontry.

The British Lions hooker, Kennedy, who made his first eppearance of the season for the club last week, retains his place in the front row with White as one of his props. Richardson dispisces Carroll at lock and a first chance is given to Davey, the former Blackheath flauk forward.

Scott, who played for England schoolboys two seasons ago when at Sutton Valence School and is sow at Loughborough Colleges, will be at flank forward for Maidstone. He is one of five players in the side who have played in the Liverpool's plans come to nothing

rom Norman Fox adapest, Nov 5 rencvaros 0 Liverpool 0 Liverpool's remorse at being iminated from the European Cup inners' Cup by Ferencearos on e away goals rule here today was aced in criticisms of the referee sided in criticisms of the referee in of hard defensive tackling by the Hungarians, and seen in the st minute collapse of Smith when bottla was thrown in his director. But Florian Albert, the rmer Hungarian international, we technical director to erenevaros, summed up the atch prignantly when he said: Liverpool just had no ideas up ont."

ont."
There seems no question of the ottle on the pitch bringing about replay as it did in the case of orussia Mönchen Gladbach gainst Internazionale a few asons ago. Although Smith laims to have a mark on his houlder where the brandy bottle it him, the referee said it did nor, nd he will say so again in his eport to the European Football Jinion (UEFA). I understand the TEFA representative here went as "IEFA representative here went as ar as to say the bottle was on the nich all the time. I did see the bottle come out of the crowd, but ould not say whether it hit Smith.
All of this confusion came at the

All of this confusion came at the end of a tie that was effectively won a fortnight ago at Anfield, when a late goal by Mate gave. Ferencearos a 1—1 draw and so the away goal that was decisive. Again here, Mate was the outstanding player, yet it was more of a medical victory for the Hungarians.

Boh Paisley, the Liverpool anager, decided to use Keegan as midfield player with Boersma read. He also wanted 15 minutes Keegan: out of place?

for the team to settle and then attack the Hungarian "with everything". Neither plan worked, despite Keegan's tireless work, and in the end Cormack and Toshack were hrought on in desperation while Fereocvaros kept cool; they themselves not having scored the early goal for which they were looking, yet content to bold the one they scored at Anfield.

To understand Liverpool's die-

To understand Liverpool's disappointment it was necessary to bear Mr Paisley later saying that bear Mr Passiey later saying that Ferencyaros were the poorest Hungarian side they had ever played and that his team should have had two penalties. Certainly they could have had one when Kennedy was hauled down. However, Kennedy was roughly treated throughout, and that was partly hecause, as Mr Albert said, Ferencyaros, a young side, owned the first half. They allowed Keegan to run himself dry into Liverpool's half. Attack was their good form of defence and the occasional ball lobbed into Ferencearos, a their own penalty area was usually cleared towards Mate, a neat, roaming winger who always carried the ball protectively. One of his early shots was hastily blocked by Lawler and another hit Callaghan. Only in the last few minutes of the first half did Liverpool emerge from their blunted state and promptly Kennedy had his name taken after back to allow Liverpool to have more possession. It came to nothing—a fact admitted by the substitutions, though Mr Paisley said he removed Kermedy because of the physical battering he was taking. Either way, Ferencvaros soon had Mate snapping back. He missed one fine chance but made up for that when be drove a spleodid free kick over the Liver-pool wall to exact an equally good save from Clemence.

Bitterness added to Liverpool's bad day. Keegan had his name bad day. Keegan had his name taken for attempting to get at a ball the goalkeeper was holding on the ground, and in the last minute came the incident with the bottle. Seemingly, Liverpool will not protest because the referee was only a few yards from the incident. Even if the action was filmed by Hungarian television, there is virtually no chance of a replay, only a fine for Ferencyaros. Their own supporters quickly grabbed the bottle thrower and handed him over to the police. Liverpool claim that other bottles were thrown near the trainers' beniches during the game and were handed thrown near the trainers' benches during the game and were handed to the referee. What seemed more significant, however, was that few of the Liverpool players or offi-cials had many good words for the Ferencyaros team who had outwitted them despite being a mixture of youth and experience. The English league leaders English league leaders seem in danger of inward-looking complaceocy in these matters.

Forecasting Test 12 on day when Australians had to think big

From John Woodcock Cricket Correspondent

Melbourne, Nov 5

Any mention of cricket here today has been purely coinciden-Any mention of cricket here today has been purely coincidental, as it is, presumably, at Haoley during the regatta or at Cardiff Arms Park wheo Wales are playing England. The reason for this has been the Melbourne Cup, which was run this afternoon and which to the average Australian makes the English Derby seem no more important than the five o'clock at Hexham, it was won by Think Big. bred, like many previous winners of this great race, in New Zeatand. Whether on such a day a message about cricket will find a handler I do not know, but, in the hope that it will, here are a few thoughts on the way the Australia.

namer I do not know, but, in the hope that It will, here are a few thoughts on the way the Australian side for the first Test match, starting in just over three weeks' time, is shaping. The certainnes would seem to be the two Chappells, Redpath, Marsh and Walker. Described on all sides alia in bowler, at medium pace, Walker will he playing for Victoria against MCC on Friday.

Striving for the other five places are four batsmen, Ross Edwards, Walter Edwards, Woodcock and Davis, four spin howlers, Mallett (off breaks), Jenner, O'Keeffe, and Higgs (all leg hreaks), and four faster bowlers, Lillee, Jeffrey Thomson, Dymock and Gilmour. According to my taxl driver here last night the best leg spin howler in Australia is a Ceylonese by the name of Francke, who plays for Oneensland, but is not yet eligible for Australia.

If he continues to make runs for Western Australia the likeliest. If he continues to make runs would seem to be Walter Edwards. He has started the season better than Woodcock and has the advantage of being a left-hander. Ross Edwards, who is unrelated although also a West Australian, will probably but at No 6. He had a poor season to 1972-73. In fact, he has not made many runs since getting 170 not ont against England at Trent Bridge in 1972, but be is getting among them again now, and Davis, in the Test matches that he has played, has heem unsoccessful. . This leaves either one fast this leaves either one fast bowler and two spinners or one spinner and two fast bowlers to be found, unless they leave out a bats-man in order to fit in another bowler. They are marginally more likely to go for the two faster bowlers and an extra bataman. If so, only one of the four bowlers will get in, with Mallert and Jenner (his match figures were eight for 138 for South Australia against MCC) just ahead of O'Keeffe and

MCC) just ahead of O'Keeffe and Higgs.

For sheer speed Tbomsoo, of Queensland, is said now to he ahle to give Lillee a yard or two. Benaod describes him as being only just below the category of "very fast". He is flery, too, hut wild. Gilmour and Dymock are both left arm and fast medium, Gilmour cao bat as well. There would seem to he just sufficient quality here to make Lillee's return not yet a foregone conclusion. If the pitth at Brisbane looks like beiog sinw, Lillee may be kept on ice for Perth, his home town, and Australia's fastest pitch. lia's fastest pitch.

At this distance and on a day when it would be wrong not to make a forecast of some kind (Think Big's price was 12 to 1), the Australian selectors (Neil Harvey, Philip Ridings, a former captain of South Australia, and Samuel Loxton) may finish up hy naming these for Brisbane: Redpath, W. Edwards, I. Chappell (captain), G. Chappell, Walters. R. Edwards, Marsb, Gilmour. Mallett, Jenner, Walker and Thomson. Besides Walker, MCC will come up against Redpath here no Friday. Yesterday he led Victoria to victory over Western Australia in his first match as captain. At 13, life is starting again for himwith another trip to England next year and a day or two hy the Test, as well as a Test or two by day, to look forward to.

Dennis Amiss's arm is still sore as the result of his throwing it nut in Adelaide. He did not prac-tise today—no one did, partly because of the rain, which has prevented there being a full programme of grade cricket for the past five Saturdays—and he will past five Saturdays—and he will give it a rest tomorrow when 11 of the party travel to Warrnambnol to play the Victorian Country Districts. Ooe of the first English cricketers to play in Warrnamhool was W. G. Grace, almost 100 years ago. Old is the other one on the injured list, with a damaged ligament behind the knee, but there is nothing new about that, and be is usnally fit to turn out when be has to.

The MCC team is: D. Lloyd, B. W. Luckhurst, M. H. Denness, K. W. R. Fletcher, A. P. E. Knott, F. J. Titmus, D. L. Underwood, R. W. Taylor, P. Lever, G. G. Arnold and M. J. Hendrick.

Pakistan's official invitation to India

Lahore, Nov 5 .- The Board of Control for Cricket in Pakistan announced today that they bad jovited India to tour Pakistan during the 1975-76 season. The hoard said that if India were free a full tour could he arranged; if not, a tour of three Test matches and two three-day matches might be possible.

India and Pakistan had last met in 1960 in India where all five Test matches were drawn. The series began in 1952 with the visir of Pakistan to India. India then won two Test matches, Pakistan one and the remaining three were drawn. Two years later India visited Pakistan and all four Tests were drawn.

Bombay, Nov 5.—The West Indian cricketers, who arrived here yesterday for their three-month tour of India, had their first net practice at the new Wankhede stadium here today. After practising again tomorrow morning they will leave for Poona to play their first match against West Zone, starting on Thursday.

A fairly large crowd watched the A fairly large crowd watched the visitors. The fast bowlers, Roberts Holder, Boyce and Julien wart well helow full speed. Gibb played his usual guile wit off-breaks. Rowe showed up among the batsmen, hitting stopowerful shots off the back for the left-banded Kallicharran a looked to good form.—Reuter.

Claim for equal prize money at Wimbledon by any threat of the leading world women's players to boycott next year's championships If the prize money does not equal the men's. At the moment the winner of the men's singles receives £10,000 and the women's champion £7,000.

The Wimbledon committee has under consideration a letter from the Women's International Tennis Association suggesting there should be equal pay for men and women. Memhers of the association include Billie Jean King, the president, Rosemary Casals. Virginia Wade and Julie Heldman who has openly said that the association "means business."

Major David Mills, the secre-tary of the All England Club where the championships are staged, said yesterday: "Thy committee are now considering the letter and are going into the ques-tion of prize money for next year. Argentina defended as venue for World Cup

Rome, Nov 5.—An Argentine sporting official today vigorously defended his country against allegations that it was unfit to stage the 1978 World Cap because of violence in the country. violence in the country.

The official, Hr Oscar Ganete Blasco, press coordinator at the Secretariat of State for Sport and Tourism, will be chief of the World Cup press office if Argentina is confirmed as the venue for the 1978 competition. He said: "Violence is a world wide problem; it is all around us; but violence is not football, politics is not sport." He added that Argentina had received a bad press about violence in the country, but there was plenty of violence in other countries.

City manager does not want Chivers The Manchester City manager

Tony Book, yesterday ended speculation about the clinb's interest in Martin Chivers, the Tottenham Hotspur player seeking a transfer.

Mr Book said: "I won't be making any move for Chivers. My chairman has told me that money is available, but my feelings are that City will only ao for the best. I have made inquiries about the best and they are not available, so best and they are not available, so I am marking time and concentrating on my own players—money has never bought a championship side." Mr Book feels that Sours' £300.600 valuation is too high for a 29-year-old player.

The City chairman, Peter Swales, said: "If Tony wants any financial backing, it's there. I won't bring any pressure on him to buy, of course. I wouldn't do that because this kind of thing is his decision. We have merely discussed the situation and I thought it was the right thing to remind him there is money available if he wants it."

Big increase in World Cup profits

Rome, Nov 5.—The 1974 World Cup in West Germany made two and a half times as much profit as the previous competition in Mexico in 1970, Mr Rene Courte, chief of the press office of the International Football Federation (FIFA) said

Mr Courte was briefing the press at a meeting of the finance committee for the 1974 World Cnp. He expressed FIFA's satisfaction at the way the West Germans had organized the finals.

The competition made approximate net profit of 50m Deutsche marks (58m), Mr Courte added this will be divided up as follows: 10 per cent to FIFA, 25 per cent to the West German association and 65 per cent to the 16 finalists.

He said that the total number of spectators at the 38 matches in West Germany was 1,769.062. An average of 71.2 per cent of available tickets was sold for each

The new group, Disability Alliance, bas been brought together because disabled people are deeply angry at what they see as a mtal rejection of their needs. The trigger was the publication just before the election of a Commons paper on social security for disabled people. The same day, the Conservatives published their proposals which followed similar lines:

"We fully expected, confidently anticipating, that the Commons paper would present a plan for a properly structured national disability income scheme", said Dr Fred Reid, president of the National Federation of the Blind in the United Kingdom. "What we got was a string of nitpicking minor proposals. They are useful, hut they are not a plan for the burden of disability that the community should be taking

The government proposals, to which the Conservatives are also committed, would introduce a noncootributory invalidity pension for disabled people of just like that", she said. working age. Labour Party is sweet and aur-prising, especially when one considers its discordant past and its internecine babits. There bas been nothing quite like it in my adult lifetime. But a deeper cause is the manifesto on which those elections were fought.

This remarkable document, substantially the same in its material content for both elections, has succeeded in identi-fying the highest common denominator of radicalism in the Labour coalition and getting it firmly established as the party's policy. The result is that moderate Labour MPs like myself support it with genuine manifesto. The possibilities are these. With the Opposition so fragmented among different parties. and the largest Opposition The Labour Party by contrast is marvellously united. With the Labour Party united as seldom before, and its agreed programme one of genuinely radical reform, that term could see the most far-reaching aocial reconstruction since the Attlee administration. The prospect is a thrilling one.

But there is also the dire waroing. Though the opposition may be unable to defeat Lahour, Labour could still defeat itself, for its proclivity towards self-injury is netorious.
All its boped-for achievements depend on its remaining united. And its unity is defined by the manifesto. Therefore any group coalition at risk. Founded 1912, Commercial Credit, the $4 billion finance and insurance group, and Maryland's largest company, has been solving credit problems world wide.

Now, it could be solving yours in Britain.

In June this year, the British financial services group, First Fortune Holdings, was acquired by Baltimore's Commercial Credit Companyone of the world's largest finance companies. .

Which means that First Fortune is now backed by the resources and expertise of a group that's spent more than sixty years breaking new ground in providing credit services for its corporate and private

Back in 1916, Commercial Credit was one of the first companies to provide credit finance for those new and startling inventions,

Today, it employs more than 8,400 people in 15 countries, has assets of $4 billion deployed in a strategically-balanced mixture of markets, and is still a leading innovator.

Now, in Britain, it aims to play a major role in consumer lending by expanding First Fortune's substantial existing activities in this sector. If that sounds ambitious, consider the fact that the Group currently has more than 800 loan offices throughout the United States and Canada; that it has more than $2 billion outstanding in personal loans and consumer financing.

Among other things, the Company is also the largest single source of finance for the computer industry, the leader in finance for general aviation, and finances and leases plant, machinery and raw material for industry-from fork-lift trucks to fuel for nuclear reactors.

Additionally, the Group owns major insurance companies in North America, as well as banks in France and Luxembourg.

In fact, whatever your financial needs, there's almost certainly a Commercial Credit service that can meet them.

And now you can have easy access to them in Britain—through First Fortune and its subsidiaries.

We could be solving quite a lot of problems for you next year. But don't feel you have to wait till then.

Administration, is an American who does not mince words. A New Yorker, be has been in Baltimore more than a quarter of a century with a particularly distinguished record in the porr's industry, being immediate past president of the North Atlantic Ports Association.

Mr Halpin is not the man to bask in the glow of Balti-more's waterfront history. It began in 1706 as a wheat port in the sbadow of the more powerful Annapolis and the tobacco ports strung along Chesapeake Bay.

Baltimore city was founded 23 years after the port and that trade artery has been the metropolis's main indus-trial lifeline since. For 100 years Baltimore was virtually the granary of the West Indies and today grain is still an important cargo.

The scene bas changed a lot now. Under Mr Halpin. who came to the independent Maryland Port Authority in 1963, and his superior, Mr Joseph L. Stanton, now the Maryland port administrator under the state's Department of Transportation, the Balrimore port complex has estab-lished itself as the most active container port on the United States east coast apart from New York.

It has been bighly successful with motor vebicles, both cars and the beavier commercials as well as military armoured cars, tanks and other glaots. It is proving a considerable specialist io heavy lift cargoes where c equipment for setting factories and plants up factories and plants abroad is shipped from the United States as for the River project Russia.

In his latest anoual survey Mr Stanton ootes, as well as a record for cargo in the past year, a 26 per cent rise in exports, particularly bulk-cargoes, and a 15.7 per cent rise in imports. Containerized freight at 2,640,000 tons was up 47 per cent on 1972.

W DO YOU TALK YOUR WAY ROUND A LANGUAGE BARRIER?

With the birth and expansion of the European Economic Community, the need for European peoples to communicate freely with each other has never been greater.

For this reason, Europa is essential reading for men of influence in Europe today.

In Europa, Europeans have come together for the first time to write exclusively on European business affairs, for Europeans. Europa contains articles by Europe's most respected writers, writers from Die Welt, Le Monde, La Stampa as well as The Times and appears within each of these newspapers once a month. Each version carries the same editorial, written and translated into the reader's mother-tongue immediately before publication. Europa's not only a unique newspaper. It's a unique advertising medium, reaching 5½ million readers in the four countries of publication Europa reaches 72 per cent o opinion leaders and 45 per cent of businessmen throughout Europe, wi h a cost per thousand figure lower than any of its competitors. Europa also offers a unique service whereby advertisements are translated, like the editorial, into the reader's mother-tongue-with all the accuracy you'd expect from Europe's quality newspapers. What makes things so simple is that only one order and one set of copy are required and clients receive only one invoice in sterling with a nuncement is to be British traval presence in the Indian Ocean is necessary. There will probably be no government decision on this until the defence white paper next February. The arguments are heavily in favour of maintaining that presence, bowever modestly. Russian naval strength in those waters is building up, and when the Suez Canal opens it may build up further. Yet the West's oil lifeline runs from the gulf, and it cannot be good diplomacy to leave it totally unpoliced, the tankers moving only by leave of the Russian fleet. The Russians may never interfere with the tankers, but on the other hand if the tankers were at their mercy in a period of tension, as might at any time occur in the Middle East, they might be tempted to be obstructive or threaten obstruction, in a way that they would not if it meant risking a clash with western warships.

The African states from Ethiopia to Mozambigoe certainly do not want the aea to be vacated to Russian naval overlnrdship. They (with India) might prefer it to be neutralized. but so long as the Russians are there, they want at least some countervailing western force there too. They may not wish to say this openly, but there is no doubt of their aharp appre-ciation of their own interest in not having their seas given over to Russian control.

Britain bas, as well as its naval rule, defence arrangements of various kinds with Kenya and Mauritius, and will probably have them with an independent Seychelles. In addition Britain has responsibilities for the Diego Garcia base, which provides facilities for the American navy when needed. To service these agreements naval visits are necessary.

If a western naval presence there is desirable, it cannot simply be left to others to provide it. The Americans cannot be expected to fill a gap caused by Britain's withdrawal, nor can this be left to France, the Netherlands or other Nato powers-or to Japan, which is also vitally interested in the flowof oil. It may be desirable that the the abandonment of traval West should operate jointly responsibilities in the Indian (this may be decided at the next. Ocean.

Nato review) but Britain could not pull out just as others were chipping in. The balance of the strategic argument is in favour of Britain continuing to send its ships into the area. No doubt conditions may change, particularly as Iran develops a naval capability. For the time being the Indian Ocean cannot be vacated.

The next question is whether an adequate naval presence can be maintained without the backup of the Simonstown base or The reopening of the treaty. canal will help the West's naval logistics as well as the Russians'. Moreover, the black African states would find it easier to aervice British ships and visits if Britain could be rid of the entanglement of the treaty relationship with South Africa. The probability is that if there were no formal treaty, the Africans would not raise objection to the normal use of Simonstown by warships needing services and even refits, which, as Mr Botha has observed, ships of all nations can make. Joint exercises certainly embarrass the African leaders (who have their own public npinion to consider), but Britain is no longer supplying naval equipment. South Africa can be relied on to keep the base in operational condition for allied ships as well as their own to use in emergencies.

South Africa's cooperation is needed to help solve tha other problems of southern Africa, notably Rhodesia and South-West Africa. Consultations about the treaty could contribute to the developing discussions on this wider subject. Snubbing South Africa will merely postpone solutions, and will not (whatever the Left supposes) ingratiate Britain with black Africa, Black Africa's demands on Britain are longer than Simonstown. . The conclusing must be that sensibla and wide-ranging talks with South Africa are worthwhile, and that these talks could include negotiations to wind up the Simonstown treaty; but that none of this should be directed towards

One of them, the Jubilee Market, is being offered for rent, but so far there have been no takers. However, the small offices associated with the market (a kind of accommodation that is very scarce in central London) are in some demand. Many enterprises faced with high rents elsewhere, like the smaller art galleries adjacent to Bond Street, might venture to move to an area so well-placed. But any considerable migration of the fine art trade to the Covent Garden area -and they would be suitable settlers-would probably require a lead from one of the large auctioneers. Nationalization of land

From Professor D. R. Denner. Sir, The reference in the Queen's Speech to the Government's intention to nationalize all development land makes strange reading at a time when on every hand we are warned of the impending rise of 60 per cent and more in local rates.

The Government's White Paper "Lend" (Cmrd 5730) which sets out the nationalization proposals is written in the imperative mood and commits the Government to "lay a dury on local authorities to acquire all land required for private deve-lopment (and redevelopment); and to do so ten years in advance of requirements

Tha only breathing space to be allowed is a transition period designed to give the local authorities time to make good the shortage of skilled manpower. It cannot be denied that the Government's prograinne for the acquisition of all development land will be held up probably indefinitely for want of skilled staff, and other administrative problems, but what of the other topically urgent matter of money?

To accomplish a mammoth To accomplish a mammoth acquisition programme on the scale envisaged by the Government must be far beyond the financial competence of local anthorities at tha present time. If money is fed into their coffers from central government funds, where will it come from? It will either mean printing more money, or putting into circula-tion Land Bonds. Either alternative will amount to the same thing-a wholly irresponsible fiscal policy in these days of unprecedented inflation and economic instability. Yours faithfully,

Simonstown agreement

From Mr Peter Trew . Sir, Of 5,150 allied merchant ships sunk in the Second World War 559, or one ship in nine, were sunk in the South Atlantic or the Indian Ocean. Most tankers are now too large to use the Snez Canal. even if it were open, and must go via the Cape.

The use of Simonstown is therefore vital to the defence of the West. If this Government is so lacking in a sense of responsibility that it ahrogates the Simonstown agreement, then what is rightly Britain's burden will simply be shouldered by other countries.

Mr Wilson must decide what is more important—the unity of the Labour Party or the defence of the free world. Yours faithfully, PETER TREW, ... Great Oaks, Shipbourne.

Sir, Your leading article on Simonstown (October 25) correctly points out the severe impracticality of the Government's present attempts to split hairs between the diplomatic and the "strictly operational" aspects of naval joint exercises. But these attempts are worse than impractical. They are also in direct contravention of the party policy on the basis of which the Government has heen elected.

It is true that the passage on Simonstown in Labour's programme for Britain makes no specific reference to the requisite racial balance for inter-naval cocktail parties. But it has nn need to. It does the only honest thing and pledges that joint exercises will be scrapped altogether. What does the Government think it is up to? Yours, etc.

Labour Party and the BBC

Sir, I'm sure I can't be the only one of your readers to find today's report (October 31) of Labour Party "suspicion" of BBC "bias" depressing. The spectacle of a great party founded on nonons of justice and democracy and seriousness complaining about what, if they exist, are surely inevitable and minor buman frailties in an organization envied the world nver for its own qualities of public service and independence is disheartening. In my npinion, it was the clockwatching imposed on the television companies by the political parties themselves which was a major cause of the tedium and lack of conviction in the last election coverage. Impartiality, thus computed, sterilized content. Moreover this persistently cultivated mistrust can only make it extremely difficult for the Annan Committee (whose findings are immensely important for the future of broadcasting in this country) which ought, surely, to be allowed to do its work before a reasonably neutral hackcloth. The threat of starvation

From Mr Dick Toverne

Sir, After the war a threat of starvation in Germany, Eastern Europe and Asia was averted by grain rationing in the batter fed countries. Britain introduced bread rationing for the first time.

Today the threat of starvation, as you have so prominently reported, is likely to affect infinitely greater numbers. Millions are already starving. At the same time the developed countries are infinitely more affinent and their affluence, as the declaration of the 25 experts at the UN Conference points out, has helped to cause the grain shortaga because of the widespread use of grain for animal products.

Surely there is an overwhelming case in justice for official rationing until tha food reserve for which the 25 have called bas been established? Yours faithfully,

DICK TAVERNE, 60 Cambridge Street, SW1. November 5.

From Professor Leonard Joy and Mr

Philip Payne Sir, Your leader of October 28 drawing attention to tha threat of starvation was fully warranted but it is disturbing that the nature of the problem and the measures relevant to its solution are widely misunder-

The growing demands by the rich for food grain to feed livestock, the recent rise in the cost of farm inputs and the loss of impetus of the Green Revolution have aggravated the threat of starvation, moreover the withdrawal of the United States as stockpiler of last resort has made world markets vulnerable to severe price fluctuations. But even without these problems the prospect of malnuminon would have been Without them, the only difference would have been that we should have been anticipating "oversupply" and a fall in grain prices rather than a serious rise. This would have made it easier for many wage earners to subsist. It would have meant, in-deed, that in the short run the overall magnitude of the problem would have been smaller. It would have given us a breathing space-more time to find the necessary solutions, What the fuel crisis has done has been to confront us more urgently with the problem which we bad eventually to face. It is the growing tide of landless unemployed who cannot afford to live, who are the world's problem. And, because of their poverty, there is no solution to their problem to be found in attempts to increase food supplies-for nohody will prodoce food for them if they cannot pay for it—or in attempts at voluntary population control. The only solution in the long run is to ensure that everybody is productive of their own sub-sistence. In the short run, if the poorest are to survive, it will be through charity-private or public. This vast human problem which now confronts us is thus a social nne. We certainly have to increase our food supplies and we shall need to invoke technological expertise to assist in this. But we shall not succeed in removing the threat of star-vation unless we find ways of increasing food supplies which also absorb the landless into productive employment. Food stocks for price stabilization, charity and disaster relief are nf course essential hur they will not solve the underlying problem. Most disasters are simply dramatic mani-festations of chronic conditions.

Michael Hornsby told us clearly Why a good harvest may not save thousands from starvation in West Bengal" (The Times, October 18). Good harvests and effective relief programmes are not enough. Nor is "development". Unless "development is directed explicitly at reducing deprivation it is, according to historical experience, certain to increase it.

The nature of this most crucial challenge in the history of human society is to find approaches to deve-lopment which reduce rather than

However, I helieve he overestimates the economic henefits that individual firms can expect to reap from making their work more interesting. It is true that there are benefits: people who enjoy their work stay longer in their jobs and come to work more often; turnover and absenteeism are reduced. In cases like the Swedish motor industry, where few local people could he recruited and jobs bad to be refilled about three times a year, these could he important economies. In general however firms cannot rely on becoming more productive simply by making their work more enjoyable. If they could, one would expect quite a number of them to do so spontaneously. Your correspondent's figures are aliquent enough. He mentions "39 known applications" of the new ideas in his country. The number of manufacturing establishments in this country, in the last year for which figures are available (1968), was 82.343. I don't want to argue further by hurling learned references across your columns; but the conclusions of some thirty existing studies of the subject (summarized in Michael Argyle's The Social Psychology of Work) was that there is either a very small positive corralation, a very small negative one, or no correlation at all between "work satisfaction" and productivity. The average correlation of all the studies almost negligible, though positive.

. A new machine can of course be less monotonous and also—because it is new—more productive. A

Welsh devolution

From Lord Chalfont Sir, May I reply briefly to two recent letters on the subject of a Welsb parliament. Although, of course, I cannot agree with Mr. Neil Kinnock's opinion (Letters, November 1) that the Walsh people do not feel it necessary to have a parliament, I do not deny the force of his general argument, and especially that concerning the Welsh language. It is vitally important that this issue should be handled in such a way that those who wish to ensure the survival of the Weish language do so in a way which unites and does not divide the Turning to Lady White's letter (October 30) I will not react to her comments on my fitle, or my familiarity with the "ardours of legislation", except to express mild in regret that not all my former colleagues are able, as Neil Kinnock is, to debate serious and the colleagues are restricted to the colleagues are able, as Neil Colleagues are able, as Neil Colleagues are able, as Neil Colleagues are able of the political issues without descending to personalities. I hope, however, that you will allow me to correct some seriously misleading impressions which may have been created by her letter. First, my article, as anyone wbo had read beyond the headline would have appreciated, was not, as she seems to suppose, on "Welsh seems to suppose, on "Welsh nationalism". It was on the recommendations of the Kilbrandon Commission. Second, I was not advocating the hreak up of the United Kingdom. Indeed, I said so quite specifically in my article. Lady White knows perfectly well the difference between separatism and federalism on the one hand, and legislative devolution on the other. Third, I did not suggest that five memhers of the Kilbrandon Commission were against devolution for Wales. I wrote quite clearly that five of those who signed the majority report were against it, and this happens to be a fact. My most important reason for taking issue with Lady White, bow-ever, is that she fails to address herself to the main point of conten-tion. If her arguments are valid for Wales then they are valid for Scotland too, and there is no case for discrimination. In spire of my shameful lack of experience on law making, I am prepared to debate the question of devolution with Lady White or with anyone else, but I think we ought to get the facts right

It was argued that, because the wardship jurisdiction had never wardship jurisdiction had never been invoked in any case remotely like the present, the court, through theoretically baving jurisdiction, should not entertain the application but har it in limine.

His Lordship rejected that contention. There was nothing in the authorities to suggest that there was any limitation in the theoretical scope of the wardship jurisdiction, or to put if another way, that the jurisdiction could may be invoked in the categories of cases in which it had hitherto been invoked, such as custody, care

Do the contrary, the powers of the court in the wardship jurisdiction had always been described as heing of the wiflest nature. That the courts were avoilable to protect children from Injury wherever they properly could was no modern development.

His Lordship referred to decided cases going back to 1557 and textbooks and said that his understanding of the origin and functions of the wardship jurisdiction was that all subjects owed allegiance to the Crown. The Crown had a dnty to protect its subjects, especially the young under the age of 18. It was so because children were especially vulnerable. They had not formed defences inside themselves which older people had and therefore needed especial protection. Chil-

what orders to make were always within the court's discretion. The implications must be weighed. In the present case the publishers understandably urged that there might be wide implications concerning the freedom to publish if urders of the kind asked for were made. In other categories of case there might be overriding considerations of various kinds in the public interest as in In re Mohamed Arif ([1968] Ch 643). It would be unlikely that the court would make a wardship order when a child was brought in as a tehicle to achieve some ulterior monve, for example, a commercial une.

For the publishers it had been oreaed that to exercise the powers would curb freedom of publication. That was putting it far too high. The court certainly should be wary and circumspect, but there was no reason why the court should not protect a child in a proper case and every reason why it should. His Lordship stressed the words "in a proper case". There might not be many, and the publishers' properly voiced fears of the wider effects on publishers and publication were probably exaggerated, if not unfounded.

Bacteria: Two sisters under the skin

The infinite variety and ingenious cootrivances that bacteria display in cooling with their environment bave made them a favourite organism for the sophisticated manipulations of molecular biologists seeking clues to fundamental gists seeking clues to fundamental chromosome through many generations. Very rarely, the phage genetic processes. But some of those hacterial characteristics are of more than academic interest: In fact, they can represent the difference between life and death to an unfortunate person infected with the organism.

Evidence has just been reported by American workers that the two species of hacterinm which cause botulism and gas gangrene, very different diseases, are really sisters under the skin. Although they cause widely differing diseases, the two species can be transmuted into each other by Infection with different bacterial viruses. VITUSCS.

The two species in question are Clostridium bothlinum type C, the food poisoning bacterium, which produces one of the most lethal toxins known, and Clostridium noigh type A, one of the casual organisms of wound gas gangrenewisch wreaked such havve in the First World War and before. The clostridia are a group of hacteria found mainly in the soil nacteria found mainly in the soil, and contain as well as the specles causing hotulism and gangrene the causal agents of tetanus and other less fatal sorts of food puisining. All the pathogenic species produce very powerful toxins and various other destructive enzymes. Some years ago ft was found that the foxin production in Clastridium hofuknum was governed by a specific bacteriophage, and that when the bacterium was "cured" of the phage by approoriate treatment, the strain could not produce toxin until it bad been relatected. In such cases of "lysogeny"

the phage DNA becomes integrated into the hacterial chromosome and to all intents and purposes bebaves exactly as if it were a set of hacterial genes, being transferred to daughter cells with the hacterial chromosome through many generations. Very rarely, the phage DNA will imp out of the chromosome again and act as an ordinary virus, producing many copies of itself and eventually breaking ocen the cell. Special treatment will also lead to loss of the obage without lysis—" curing."

This led Dr M. W. Eklund and his colleagues of the Nacional Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Scattle to investigate the other Cinstridium species which produced toxins. In the course of their work they found, not surprisinely, that toxin production by C. noini type A was also under the control of a bacteriophage. But they also discovered that if a toxin-producing strain of C. bouilinum was cured of its bacteriophage and then reinfected with the phage from C. noini it was transformed into the toxin-producing transformed into the toxin-producing C. hotulinum type D by infection with the appropriate phage.

nfection with the appropriate Phage.
This phenomenon of "phage This phenomenon of "phage conversion" is by no means restricted to the clostridia. The diphtheria hacterium ornduces its toxin only when infected with a phage carrying the tox gene for toxin production, and in certain types of salmonellae the production of the cell surface antigens by which they are recognized is also onder the contral of particular hacterionhages.

Government Borrowings by France likely to top $6,000m

French borrowings in the long-term international market are likely to total at least $6,000m (about £2,608m) this year, according to M Jean-Pierre Fourcade, Finance

In an interview with a private-newsletter published in Paris, M Fourcade explained the borrowings were necessary to deal deficit, which is expected to with the balance of payments total hetween $6,000m and

"This process can only be temporary", he added, pointing out that France could not hope to finance such a large deficit over the next 10 years.

Although seen as only a temorary solution to the country's borrowing, the French decision to use the long-term markers on this scale represents a major change in policy on the question international borrowing.

Until February the French had rigidly opposed anything which would involve long-term indebtedness on the grounds indebtedness on the grounds that this would lead to the creation of a reserve role for the franc, similar to that of tha pound and the United States dollar.

However, under the impact of the oil crisis, the French have bee forced to adopt a policy not unlike that of the United Kingdom, and have been using nationalized industries to raise loans in the market with con-siderable success. So far, according to market reports, French state and private industries have arranged loans totalling roughly $5,000m, of which something like $3,000m has been taken up.

The success of this borrowing policy means that the government does not expect to have to draw on the $1,500m loan which it arranged for itself on the Eurodollar market in February, or on the special deposit of $300m made by the Iranians. Use of these is expected in 1975.

Hint of minimum price rule for Indications that the Civil Aviation Authority was seriously considering the introduction of minimum prices for inclusive European holiday flights were given at the Association of Britisb Travel Agents Convention yesterday. The authority has already brought in minimum fare rates for North Atlantic charters.

Mr Ray Colegate, the CAA's chief of economic planning and

The control systems advo-The control systems advo-cated hy airlines such as BritisbCaledonian over the seat rates paid by the tour operator to the airline is "Ingically correct", Mr Colegate said, and a system of minimum prices could be fairly easily devised.

Referring to the North Atlantic routes, Lord Boyd-Carpenter, the CAA's chairman, told the convention that price-cutting had reached "insane proportions". The authority was forced to introduce charter floor prices on these routes to enable both the scheduled and non-scheduled carriers to earn a living. If a reasonable British sbare of the market was to be obtained, it bad "no option" but to take this step. The problem in extending the same principle to European flights according to Mr Colegate was that it could be meaningless in practice because of the fragmented nature of the business. Meanwhile, he was glad to see that tour operators had not expanded their pro-grammes for next year. He hoped this would act as a deter-

Finance For Industry makes half-year loss

Finance For Industry, which has recently been mooted as a potential vehicle for stepping up the extension of medium term credit to industry, made a pre-tax loss of £1.99m in the half year to September 30 against a pre-tax profit of £4.99m in the comparable period

The loss has been struck after making provisions of £5.25m against potential losses on group investments and financial facilities. Also, FFI states that certain quoted and property investments had fallen by the end of September to some £15m below their March 31 book value.

These falls will not be incorporated into the group's books, however, unless there is no improvement in the position by the end of FFPs financial year next March.

The bulk of the provisions to date have been made by ICFC—the Industrial and Commercial Finance Corporation which represents the largest part of the group as enlarged and reconstituted following the Corporation For Industry-in October, 1973.

At the end of the 1973-74 financial year group invest-ments and financial facilities extended to customers totalled

It has largely been on the basis that FFI is a well-established and sizable institution specializing in medium and longer term credit to industry that there bas been the recent speculation that the group would provide the obvious vehicle for creating a much more substantial medium term credit bank.

The choice of FFI for such a role would almost certainly be seen in many quarters of the City as preferable to hoosting medium credit facilities to industry by some form of state sponsored organization. The share capital of FFI is owned by the big United Kingdom clear-ing banks and the Bank of England, which bas a 15 per cent interest.

bers of the chartered institu-tions, usually regarded as the top rank of the profession, represent rather less than balf of Britain's 500,000 professional engineers. The three have pur out a discussion paper suggesting a restructure of the profession that would sweep away the CEI and replace it with a new body provisionally called the Institucon of Engineers.

They suggest that the present federal structure, with the chartered bodies equally represented, should give way to eogineers belonging direct to the new institute whose executive board would he decided by direct vote.

This is seen as a means of eoding the rift between the chartered bodies and other nonchartered engineering organengioeers, given acceptable qualifications, would be able to belong to the new institute.

Sir William in his presidential speech accepted the broad concept put forward by his own and the two other senior institutions. But he had, he said, reservations. He particularly felt that the institutions were where the knowledge and expertise of the rarious branches of the pro fession would continue to he and

STATUTORY AND GENERAL INFORMATION

The Company was incorporated by a Special Act of Parliament in 1846 and under that Act and subsequent Acts and Orders obtained powers for supplying water in an area of approximately 923 square miles comprising the major part of the new County of Avon (including the City of Bristol) and parts of Somerset, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire.

The population in the area now served by the Company is about 962,000. The daily consumption of water supplied by the Company for domestic, industrial and public use currently averages about 68 millian gallans. The length of mains operated by the Company is some 3,409 miles.

The proceeds of the present issue will be used towards the repayment of existing short term indebtedness to its bankers and others which on 15th October, 1974 amounted to £6,730,000, representing expenditure on necessary capital development.

Despite these disclaimers there are passages in their paper which might suggest to some readers that the authors are criticizing the CBI proposals on the taxadon of stock appreciatioo.

The only possible basis for such a criticism that I can find in tha paper is where they say that "if taxes were to be remitted on stock appreciation. this part of profits being treated as unreal the rom-pany could liquidate at the end of the inflationary period in a net worth condition better ... than in the non-inflationary situation '

But the CBI proposal is based on the Swedish system under which, if trading ceases and stocks are disposed of, busi-nesses are liable for tax on the realized stock appreciatiou.

On this basis, and if we make the working assumption that firms do not distribute the amounts by which their tax paymeots have been reduced, the authors' examples can be reworked, keeping all their other main assumptions intact, to show exactly the same pattern of dividends and no "windfall" gain nn liquidation. Foster Brothers Stone-Dri problems

After seven good years, growth at Foster Brothers has come to e halt. There are three reasons for this; higher costs, a decline in volume sales and continuing problems with the Stone-Dri acquisition, which in addition to its £60,000 interim pre-tax loss was largely respon-sible for the appearance of £166,000 interest charges.
On the volume side, Foster saw its sales value rise by 11 per cent to £15.6m against a netional menswear sales increase a couple of points greater and an underlying 20 per cent jump in clothing prices gener-

For the present half, the expectation is that Stone Dri's stock problems will be sufficiently ironed-out to the extent that an overall profit should accrue from this source for the full year. Cost escalation should ad the volume picture has not taken e severe turn for the worse. So one is looking for a decline in the pre-tax total from £3.33m to around tha £2.6m mark. Here, the shares at 25p on a prospective p/e ratio of 4½ and yielding of 13 per cent are not particularly attractive but are worth holding onto on the longer view. onto on the longer view.

ing at 19 per cent was not so fierce last year. However, this could change quite rapidly given the trading scenario.

Just under two thirds of last ear's pre-interest profits came from musical interests, which means records in the main, against 52 per cent in the previous year. Fortunately a great deal of this business is overseas, particularly in North America via Capinol, rather than in the United Kingdom where margins are being squeezed. Even so, records are an unpredictable and volatile area and one that EMI is likely to become increasingly dependent upon given the sharp fall last year in profits from general leisure on interests, where the outlook remains clouded.

Electronics—18 per cent of pre-interest profits last year—is the only other predictably safe growth area, mainly because of the success of the EMI Scanner. Most analysts are hoping for nearly maintained profits this year, which suggests a p/e of around 5 for the shares at 78p and a yield of about 10t per cent if an increased dividend is not taken for granted. There is little intrinsic appeal here and, unless the directors. here and, unless the directors' historic estimate of a £50m property surplus over book values is included, the shares look fully valued on asset grounds too.

Averys

Background pressures

Averys, the higgest name in weighing testing and measuring machines, would seem to have a lot going for it, including metrication and a strong supplementary husiness in servicing equipment. Moreover, nearly half its sales arise abroad. Interim results are certainly encouraging. Sales rose by nearly 18 per cent to £24.5m and pretax profits by a sturdy 23 per cent to £3.15m in the first half year. The group made headway both at home and overseas and the interim dividend is usefully

For all this, it is not plain sailing. Averys is a capital goods supplier and feels the impact of any recession a year to 15 months after capital goods spending starts to turn down. The pending Budget will be crucial, then, and so will the trend of world trade.

Meanwhile, Averys is also horr of labour as it will not match motor industry wages. It estimates that it could do with at least another 10 per cent added to its labour force.
Against this, order books remain good. Export prices have risen appreciahly.

The shares gained in to 51p where they are a whisker from the low, and down from 78p touched earlier this year. Averys expect second-half pre-tax profits (to December) to be around the £4.9m made in the same months the year before, but investment income will go down as Averys spends cash on working capital. A prospective yield of just over 13 per cent and a p/a ratio of less than five, then, look about right for the moment.

Giving share option schemes a chance When the Chancellor rises to teamwork ethic which, in a large present his autumn Budget on November 12, it is to be hoped-that he will bear in mind that the special difficulties of tha British economy can be traced hack to the middle of the last century when we gave refuge to the wrong German.

Karl Marx settled here after being subjected to persecution in his native land. He did his research and main writings here, so England gave birth to the modern communist or state collective ethic.

Scotland gave birth to the individualist ethic developed a century earlier by Adam Smith. The battla between individuaism and collectivism in Britain bas undoubtedly weakened our competitive power in world markets and slowed down our rate of economic growth. Why have certain other western nations—the United States, for example—not suffered so much from this struggle between two opposing ideologies?

A significant reason in the case of America, is that at the time that Marx came bere, there was e stream of German immigrants going to tha Middle West, anxious to escape Bismarck's conscription at home. They became the natural heirs to the ideas of e very named J. H. von Thunen. He did not himself emigrate.

He was a landowner who prac-tised his ideas very successfully on his estates, making his amployees into shareholders of the business by means of a very clever profit sharing formula. His ideas completely by-passed Britain hat they have had a big impact in the United States.

There are now more than 150,000 American firms, including most of the giants, using Thunen's basic system of deferred profit-sharing, and they are increasing at the rate of

Concession

The headquarters of tha Profit-sharing Research Foundation not surprisingly is in the Middle West at Evanston, Illinois. Its influence is great and, could the British Treasury please note, deferred profitsharing schemes are given broadly the same range of tax ions in America as are employee pension schemes.

These deferred profit-sharing schemes are an important factor in rendering employees and their trade unions relatively impervious to political extrem-ism. They focus employee interest on the immediate working team in the employing corpora-tion, not on the central state. They create a corporate or organization, has rather more appeal than the individualist ethic of Adem Smith. When I have addressed meetings of employees at all levels in British companies, I have found that the teamwork ethic is very well received here, too. The idea that a company succeeds when its employees work well together as e team has instant appeal.

A logical consequence of it is that if the team succeeds its members should share in the overall rewards as team mem-bers, not solely as individual performers. Thunen recognized this point more than 100 years ego and hence he develope system of deferred profit-sharing.

It involves the sharing of profits heyond a reasonable level of return on capital em-ployed, but the employees share is not paid out in immediate cash. It is reinvested in the business for a period of time.

An employee should not have all his eggs in one hasket, so in the best schemes the rein-vestment of profits is on a roll-over basis. Facilities are available for ensuring that some of the common stock in each employee's portfolio is progressively exchanged for other securities, so that he gradually develops a halanced portfolio.

It may well be asked, why have a period of deferment?

Why not let employees have a share of cash profits so that they can decide for themselves hether to invest and how to invest? A period of investment is essential for most companies.

They cannot afford profit-sharing for a wide range of employees if it means an immediate loss of cash out of the business. Moreover, cash profit-sharing suffers from the drawback that when profits are high and bonus payments are large, employees expect the same again next year. Deferred profit-sharing emostly out the same and described profits and the same again sext year. smooths out the ups and downs. It also makes possible the weighting of company contribu-tions to individual employees in favour of length of service and to some extent age. As Sears Roebuck have shown, such weighting is appreciated by employees of all ages when they see relatively modest employees with long service retiring with as much as $400,000 worth of investments and others retiring early because they are content with less.

In Britain a recent Gnest, Keen & Nettlefolds study has indicated the fund of goodwill that many employees, particularly those with long service, have towards their company. What the American deferred profit-sharing schemes heve shown is how to maximize this could announce his intention to goodwill and hulld a stronger, look into it with a view to dealproductive, corporate

How long a period of deferment is usually involved in a deferred profit-sharing scheme? American tax law gives maximum advantage for deferment right through to normal re-

Sales

However, company schemes usually here a system of "vestiog", The company's deferred profit-sharing bonus vests in the employee and is freely salable after a period such as five years or by stages such as one-tenth par year.

The French have largely imitated the American system. They have immediate vesting of ownership, hut sale of investments is restricted for five years and thereafter the proceeds are tax free. Deferred schemes can he installed in British companies as the law stands now and they are being enstalled in some companies But they enjoy none of the tax advantages that are available in America. I am reminded of this by the present company cash shortage, when firms are trying to boost their money supply by persuading chareholders not to take a cash dividend but to take a stock dividend instead.

This idea appeals particularly to high-income sbareholders who find that instead of paying a high rate of income tax on a tash dividend, they pay only the capital gains rate of tax, a maximum of 30 per cent, when they later self their stock divid-

Mr Healey is possibly hoping that shareholders will take stock dividends instead of cash, for companies need the money. Yet we now have an anomalous situation where, if a high-income outside shareholder denies himself a cash dividend his rate of tax goes down from income tax to capital gains rate, whereas an employee who joins a share incentive scheme enabling him to acquire shares instead of instant cash, is

If he joins a deferred profit-sparing scheme his deferred bonus invested in shares soffers immediate income tax and if he option schemes established by legislation in 1972 and 1973, he suffers a new penalty. Under the Rinance Act, 1974, his rate of tax on option gains has been put up from the capital gains rate to the income tax rate. There is not much time for Mr Healey to do anything about ing with them next spring. He could also say that he was going to examine them in the light of his proposals for a wealth tax. Let me explain why, by telling the story of robbing

Peter to pay Paul. In a far away land there was man named Peter who ran a business and was considered wealthy because he had £20. He elso had an employee named Paul who was considered poor because he had only £4.

Parliement in this far away land pessed a law to the effect that no man should have more than three times as much wealth as any other man. They left the details of how to effect this to their wise and noble administrator, but it put him in a dilemma. Should he introduce a wealth tax? This would mean taking £8 off Peter, bringing him down to £12, while Peul would still have only £4. Certainly the govent would have £8 more to spend but they were already spending half the national income and he had read Parkin-soo's Law, so he did not really expect them to do better with

What alternative was there to a wealth tax? He chought long about this. Then one day he received in the post a booklet from the Middle West of America. He read it eagerly and decided to introduce a scheme of deferred profit-sharing, with appropriate tax reliefs.

This was designed to encourage Peter to part with £2 of his shares, bringing him down by 10 per cent to £18, so that Paul could increase bis wealth by 50 per cent to £6. Theo Peter would have only three times as much wealth as Paul.

Teamwork

In fact, however, the Pater nd Paul company prospered greatly through improved team-work when the scheme was introduced. Peter did not feel he had lost any wealth at all, while Paul lived happily ever

The wise administrator smiled when he heard bow well it bad turned out for Peter and Peul, but he knew that some of bis citizens were no saints-neither like Peter por Paul. So he decided to have his cake and eat it. He introduced a wealth tax well as a deferred profitsharing scheme.

Those companies which believed in teamwork and practised deferred profit-sharing up to a specified standard, could apply for an exemption certificate for their shares from the wealth tax. This story illustrates the kind approach we need in the British Treasury today. If Britain is to prosper we desperately need to stop the tax men's seesaw. We must get rid of the en-feebling party political game of tit-for-tat by which each govermment reverses the tax legislation of its predecessor.

A really had example of repeated reversals of policy is seen in employee share option and share incentive schemes. If one counts in case law decisions as well as statute law, the seesaw on options in the pest 15 years has gone like this: favourable, unfavourable, favourable, unfavourable, favourable, unfavourable. Three times up, three times down.

Precedent

When we have governments hehaving like this, who needs a pantomime at Christmas? There is, however, a simpla way in which the tax seesaw could be stopped for all types of employee share schemes. This is to follow the precedent of the French and out the tax situation clearly on a time

The Inland Revenue argues that any shareholding rights acquired by an employee must give rise to an income tax charge because they are an emolument of employment. In the past Labour governments have supported this view and

To reach a compromise let us concede the point to the Revenue for a period, say, the first five years of an employee's share participation. That is, any shareholding rights acquired by an employee, if realized within. five years, would give rise to an income tax change. But husiness is risky and any shareholding rights maintained for more than five years are surely, with the passage of time, on a different footing. The original method of acquisition of share ownership rights . surely pales into insignificance compared with the risks of shareholding. Therefore after five years any gains realized should be subjected only to capital gains tax.

Once a compromise on prio-ciple can be accepted, the details appropriate for type of employee sbare scheme logically follow. The real questioo is: are Treasury ministers willing to put a low-income employee shareholder in the same favourable tax position for capital gains, as a high-income outside shareholder?

three-year plan to hoist its sales from £2.5m to £10m by 1975.

In spite of what Mr Archy Areoson, the chairman, describes as a difficult and coopplex year the group is well on target with two of the three years gone, is "full of confidence" for the future, and bas raised its profits by nearly a third.

In the 12 months to July 31 turoover was boosted by S6 per ceot to £7.67m and profits by 31 per cent to £869,000. The company says both sales and profits would bave been substantially higher still but for the state of December 31.

Since coming to the market at the beginning of 1971 Arensoo's profits have grown steadily, the most spectacular successes being recorded over the past two years.

In its first year as a public company the £250,000 prospectus forecast was beaten with £276,000, this being followed by £385,000 and £662,000 to the great cent in 11.3 per cent. Growth was about 31 per cent in both halves. A relatively bigh amount of capital expenditure means that the group pays less tax than would otherwise have been the case, and a charge up from £285,000 to £452,000 leaves the "ret" increased by £40,000 to £417,000. A total of £122,000 cash will

MPI loss as music division falters

In only its second full year as a cootributor, 10 profits of MPI, the funeral division has more than proved its worth.

The musical side is solely responsible for a loss by the group for the first six months of 1683,500, against a profit of £156,000. The board says that the division made a loss he-cause of general economic uocertainty, and the high level of interest rates. There is no interim dividend. Losses would have been much higher bad it oot been for the funeral division, which bas cootinued to operate at expected profit levels. Turnover of the musical companies went down from £1.29m to £1.12m while the funeral side advanced from £309,000 to £382,000 giving a total of £1.50m, against £1.59m.

Over the whole of last year, group profits eased from a record £223,000 to £170,000 and a breakdown of this shows that the musical side contributed only £130,000, against £219,000, while the funeral side increased its share from £50,000 to £119,000.

Profits retained in the business.....

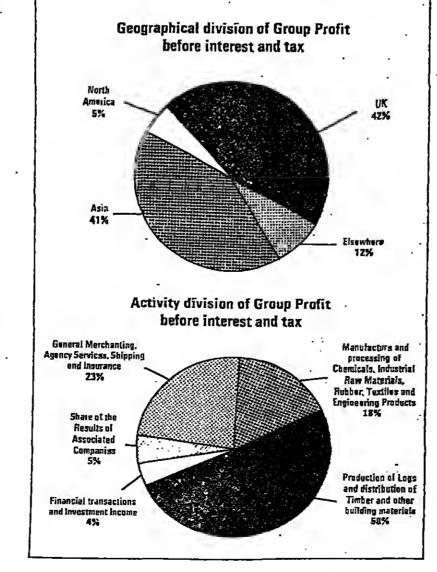

After interest, taxation and minority interests, and including extraordinary items, the Group Net Profit attributable to the Ordinary Shareholders is £7,252,228. The change in the basis of U.K. Corporation Tax, necessitating a charge at a rate of 520' on profits earned after 31st March 1973, compared with 40% previously, complicates a comparison with previous years, but the amount attributable to Ordinary Shareholders last year was £4,579,552.

The Board recommend a final dividend of 16.0143p per share, making with the interim of 6p per share a total of 22.0143p per share. With the imputed tax credit, the total dividend is 32.8571p per share, an increase of 25.17% on last year and the amount forecast with the consent of H.M. Treasury at the time of the placing of the Ordinary Shares in connection with the acquisition of British Chrome and Chemicals Ltd. The Board proposes to offer Ordinary Shareholders the opportunity of receiving fully paid Ordinary Shares in lieu of the final dividend of 16.0143p per share.

Never more than during the past year bave we had to rely on the loyalty and devotion of our staff throughout our world-wide organization. Their skill and energy are the main contributory elements in the successful account we are able to place before our Members.

For a Group like ours so widespread geographically and commercially it is always difficult to make a realistic prophesy as to prospects. Inflation, energy costs, price controls, low building construction starts, and Government intervention in every country, identify only a few of the everyday problems. Nevertheless, we have no doubt of the Group's continuing ability to face the problems of the future as resolutely as those of the past.

Dollar continues to weaken

Foreign exchange markets were quieter yesterday, although there was a flurry of activity at the opening. The main feature was again a weaker dollar, attributed to the continuing downward trend in United States interest rates.

The pound opened at $2.3455. up on overnight levels. In early business the rate moved quickly higher, touching $2,3495 before 9.30 am. However, this was not maintained and the general trading level was $2.3475. The rate was steady for most of the day. However, there was some demand for dollars as New York opened in the afternoon and the rate at one stage dipped to $2,3430. The close was $2,3445, np 15 points on the day. There was a good demand for gold, with trading conditions hectic at times. It closed at $1741, up $4 on the day. Most of the gain was made in the morning.

Discount market

Conditions were comfortable with the market closing with a surplus to be carried forward overnight, London money market sources said. The Bank of England did oot Intervene.

Surplus balances brought forward from Monday and an excess of Government disbursements over Exchequer receipts were only partially offset by a net take-up of Treasury bills and an outflow of currency notes.

Secured call loan rates closed between 3 and 5 per cent after opening between 81 and 9 per cent. Overnight rates for mescured inter-bank sterling deposits dipped to 51 per cent at the close from 10 per cent earlier.
